Red for Ed rally isn't a strike but closing schools anyway

By EMMA KATE FITTES

chalkbeat.org

Indiana teachers aren't going on strike, but experts say they are putting lawmakers on notice.

The rally today is expected to cancel school for half of the state's students while as many as 12,000 teachers descend on the Statehouse to make a list of demands, including more funding and higher pay.

"This is a warning shot," said Kenneth Dau-Schmidt, a Carr professor of labor and employment law at Indiana University. "This is a sign of how serious the problem is and how unified the teachers are."

Indiana ranked last in teacher salary raises over a 15-year period, according to a Forbes study, and discontent has grown among public educators over the past decade of education reforms — making it a place to watch as teachers strikes happened in other states.

Today's rally is the first large-scale movement the state has seen during the recent national wave of teacher protests, sometimes referred to as Red for Ed, due to the red T-shirts many educators wear when they protest.

Today is the ceremonial opening day for the legislative session and with a critical mass of teachers asking for the day off to attend the rally, more than 130 districts have cancelled classes for the day.

But it remains unclear whether the rally will be big enough to capture national attention — even with the

Madison, SW teachers to join rally in Indy

More than 55 teachers from Madison Consolidated Schools, including some administrators, and 27 teachers from Southwestern will rally in Indianapolis Tuesday morning for public education funding. Madison has scheduled an e-learning day in anticipation while Southwestern has canceled school Tuesday. Watch The Madison Courier and www.madisoncourier.com for more coverage of the rally and the issues.

GAS LINE BREAK AT WEST AND 1st

A gas line break shut down a section of West Street Monday morning at the intersection with First Street. The City of Madison Fire Department's Walnut Street Fire Company No. 4 and Madison Police Department responded and roped off the area so Vectren Energy could repair the gas line. Madison Fire Chief Bill DeVries watched as Vectren, along with Miller Pipeline employees, worked on the broken line across from the north end of Bicentennial Park. West Street was mostly cleared and back open by midday. (Courier staff photos by Collin Overton)

Madison Parks Board to vote on whether to raise fees

By PEGGY VLEREBOME
Special to the Courier

The Madison Parks Board is scheduled to vote Wednesday on whether to raise some fees including golf cart storage, dog park passes and picnic table rental. Two policy changes also are on the agenda.

The board is meeting a week earlier than its normal schedule because of the Thanksgiving holiday next week. The meeting will be at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 20, at city hall.

The meeting time is an hour later than the board usually meets and an hour later than the time first stated in notices of the meeting.

New proposals include selling passes to play pickle ball at Brown Gym. The proposed cost is $5 a day or $75 for six months during the winter. Pickle ball is a new sport for Madison, with an outdoor court being built with other play courts at the former country club, now the Elks Lodge.

Parks director David Stucker described pickle ball as "a bigger version of ping-pong and a smaller version of tennis." There are no pickles in the game; it was named for the dog of one of the game inventors.

Also new is a proposed policy that all city parks will be closed from dusk to dawn. Dusk is a half-hour after sunset and dawn is a half-hour before sunrise. A City Council ordinance approved in February 1976 sets city park hours at 5 a.m. to midnight.

Ten months later the City Council shortened the hours for Fireman's Park by seven hours, ordering that during the winter — Nov. 1 to March 1— Fireman's Park would be closed from 5 p.m. to 5 a.m. The posted hours at the dog park differ from other city parks; it is open from sunrise to sunset.

The Parks Board also will consider proposed changes to the facility-use form and make a recommendation to the City Council for an ordinance. The need for an ordinance came up when the Ku Klux Klan scheduled a gathering at a city park this year for the third time.

The Parks Board also has proposed fees on the agenda. The cost of an annual dog park pass is proposed to go up 92%, from $13 this year to $25 next year for one dog, and a fivefold increase for each additional dog in the household, from $2 this year to $10 proposed for next year.

Part of the department's cost is for plastic waste-disposal bags, Stucker said. Although two bag dispensers are at the dog park, there are others in the city, but Stucker said he doesn't know how to recoup the cost except through the dog park pass cost. The city used to order bags every two years but now orders yearly, he said. Another cost is the keypad lock on the outer gate at the dog park because it malfunctions and has to be repaired or replaced.

Other proposed fee changes that will be discussed include raising the cost of renting picnic tables, picked up and delivered, to $15 a table from the current $5; a 10% increase, from the current $260 to $300 a year, for golfers to store their golf carts at Sunrise Golf Course; and reverting to a previous fee of $3,000 a year to rent the soccer field at Rucker Sports Complex. Years ago, the Parks Board cut the fee in half when a fall season was being established; a spring league is now being established in addition to the fall league, Stucker said.

The fees for Crystal Beach swimming pool are proposed to be unchanged, he said.

Police Merit Board schedules 2nd exec session

Courier staff report

The City of Madison's Police Merit Board has called its second executive session within a week for the purpose of initiation of litigation or litigation that is either pending or has been threatened specifically in writing.

Like last week's closed session, Thursday's meeting is posted to discuss a job performance evaluation of individual employees not related to salary, compensation, or benefits during a budget process.

The Merit Board members met in closed session in the Madison City Council chambers for several hours last Thursday. No information was made public on that meeting but numerous current and former Madison, Jefferson County and Indiana State Police law enforcement officers were escorted in and out of the closed-door chamber in a meeting that involved the merit board, attorneys for the city and Madison Detective Jonathon Simpson, who is believed to have been suspended from the force for about a year.

During his tenure, Simpson was involved in many of the city's drug arrests and led an investigation with Patrolman Kyle Cutshaw that resulted in 12 arrests in August 2018. Sometime after that, his absence was noticed by members of the public and it was believed at that time that Simpson had been suspended, but no Madison Police Department or city official would comment on the situation, including Simpson.

There has been no statement since from the Madison Police Department or the city regarding Simpson's status.

Now, the Merit board has scheduled a second executive session for 4 p.m. Thursday with a public session scheduled for 9 p.m. that same evening. The agenda for the regular meeting has not yet been set but the meeting could serve as an opportunity to take official action on any recommendations that might come out of the executive session.

Indiana legal sports bets surge to nearly $92M in October

Indiana

INDIANAPOLIS — The second month of legal sports betting in Indiana saw nearly three times as much money wagered than in its opening month, with much of that surge coming from bets placed using mobile devices instead of at casinos, state data shows. Gamblers wagered a total of $91.7 million on sports in Indiana during October, compared to $34.5 million in September, according to a report released by the Indiana Gaming Commission. Regulated mobile betting began Oct. 3 when mobile sportsbook apps launched in Indiana, which attracted $48 million in bets for the month. Sports bets placed at casino windows or kiosks totaled $43.7 million, the report shows. The state collected about $1 million in sports gambling taxes last month, up from about $800,000 during the first month of legal sports wagering in September. But those totals are far below what casinos paid in taxes from their winnings on slot machines and other games, which totaled $34 million in September and $38 million in October. Football accounted for the most betting on an individual sport, at more than $41 million. Baseball accounted for nearly $10.5 million in bets.

10 inmates charged in drug scheme

JEFFERSONVILLE — Ten inmates at the Clark County jail are charged in a scheme that authorities say used codes to help smuggle drugs into the jail. The Clark County Sheriff's Office said the inmates worked with an outside contact who picked up drugs and hid them in the jail's lobby, which inmates cleaned. Col. Scotty Maples said code words were used in a computer system inmates can access to signal where the drugs would be dropped off in the lobby. Those included the words "red" and "blue" to signal that drugs would either be in a trash can by a Coke or Pepsi vending machine. Inmates no longer clean the jail lobby. The 10 inmates and a 41-year-old man face nearly 60 drug-related felonies.

Surgeon General to talk opioids at Purdue

WEST LAFAYETTE — The federal government's top doctor is making a stop at Purdue University to discuss the nation's efforts to combat the opioid epidemic. U.S. Surgeon General Jerome Adams was appointed to that post in 2017 by President Donald Trump after serving as Indiana's state health commissioner. During Monday's visit to Purdue, Adams will deliver a speech titled "The Road to Recovery: Combating the Opioid Crisis" and participate in a question and answer session with students. State health officials say Indiana had 1,800 drug overdose deaths in 2017, with nearly two-thirds of those deaths involving opioids.

Holcomb won't see big Statehouse rally

INDIANAPOLIS — Gov. Eric Holcomb isn't expected to be around the Statehouse when thousands of teachers will be attending a rally there calling for better pay. Holcomb's office said he will be in Florida Tuesday for a Republican Governors Association conference that was scheduled months ago. His trip comes as teacher unions say more than 100 school districts around the state will be closed while their teachers head to the Indianapolis protest. Holcomb hasn't criticized school districts for closing the day of the union-organized rally, saying it was a local decision and that he applauds teachers for expressing their concerns. The rally dubbed "Red for Ed Action Day" will happen on the day legislators are gathering for organization meetings ahead of their 2020 session.

Indy exhibit on LGBTQ history

INDIANAPOLIS — A new exhibit at downtown Indianapolis' public library is shining a spotlight on the history of the LGBTQ community. The exhibit that opened Thursday at Central Library contains more than 7,000 books and other items that illuminate LGBTQ history, culture and stories. The display includes a plaque dedicated to those who contributed to it over the past three decades. The items from the Chris Gonzalez Library and Archives are now a permanent library exhibit. Gonzalez was a community activist and founder of the Indiana Youth Group, an LGBTQ support organization. He died in 1994. Indy Pride executive director Chris Handberg said the exhibit allows the LGBTQ community to tell its stories out in the open for the first time.

Gunman acquitted on most serious charges

CROWN POINT — A man who claimed he was acting in self-defense when he fired 16 shots outside a Walmart store has been acquitted of the most serious charges against him. A Lake County jury convicted Alex Hughes, 27, of Gary on a criminal recklessness charge Friday for the September 2018 shooting in Hobart but found him not guilty of attempted murder and two other charges. Authorities say Hughes shot toward a group of rival gang members who left the store shortly after Hughes and his girlfriend. One man was wounded four times while another man in that group shot toward Hughes, wounding a 9-year-old boy in the parking lot. Shots from Hughes shattered windows inside the store. Hughes' sentencing is scheduled Dec. 18.

Driver wounded in interstate shooting

INDIANAPOLIS — Authorities say man was wounded in the face in a shooting that happened while he was driving on Interstate 465. Indiana State Police say investigators were searching for whoever fired at the man about 7:30 p.m. Saturday in the highway's southbound lanes near I-74. Police say the man was taken to a hospital in stable condition and he's expected to recover. Police say the gunfire came from a car that pulled alongside the driver's car. Two other people inside the car that was fired upon weren't injured. Investigators didn't immediately say what led up to the shooting but said they didn't believe it was a random attack.

Boy, 11, rescued in fall through ice

WINONA LAKE — Police officers, including one who was off duty, rescued an 11-year-old boy who fell through thin ice on a pond. Trooper Jacob Bill said he was off duty and driving his Indiana State Police car Friday when he saw Winona Lake police driving with lights and siren on. He followed them to a retention pond and ran into the water to save the boy. Bill and the boy got tangled in broken ice. Winona Lake Officer Dave Swain then got into the water to help the pair. Another Lake Winona officer helped get all three to shore. The boy was treated at a hospital and released.

Suspects throw stolen guinea pig at owner

DANVILLE — A Kentucky pet store owner said two women stole a pair of guinea pigs, lobbing one of the animals at him during their escape. News outlets report 21-year-old Isabelle Mason and 19-year-old and Jaimee Pack on Saturday tried to smuggle out the animals from Pet Paradise without paying. Owner Scott Gonyaw told WKYT-TV he confronted the suspects, screaming "Give me the guinea pigs!" as they got into a car. One suspect rolled down a window and tossed a four-month-old guinea pig named Lucky onto the concrete. The other ran over Gonyaw's foot with the car. He said he suffered bruising. Lucky wasn't injured. The other guinea pig remains missing. Jail records show Danville police charged the women with shoplifting, robbery and animal cruelty.

Applications open for entrepreneur program

FRANKFORT — The Governor's School for Entrepreneurs has begun taking applications for next year's program focusing on product innovation and business model design. A statement from the Education and Workforce Development Cabinet said the three-week summer program at Northern Kentucky University will accept 72 students who are now in ninth, 10th and 11th grade. Applications are due in January and selections will be announced in April. Students will work in teams to develop a business model, design a prototype and pitch ideas to judges. Governor's School for Entrepreneurs Chairman Koleman Karleski called the program "a unique, life-changing opportunity" to learn how to start a business. Officials say students who attend can earn high school class credits, scholarships to Kentucky colleges and universities and access to tools to become an entrepreneur.

Girl, 11, identified as house fire victim

STONE — A coroner said a body found in a burning home has been identified as an 11-year-old girl. News outlets report Pike County Deputy Coroner Mike Hall said Saturday an autopsy confirmed the victim was Ayla Eastwood. He said foul play isn't suspected. Kentucky State Police said they received a report of a fire around 4 a.m. Friday. State Police spokesman William Petry told WYMT-TV the caller said a child might be inside the home. A body was recovered about an hour later. WYMT-TV reports investigators said Ayla's mother was taken to a hospital for treatment of burns and smoke inhalation. A Facebook post shared by Mullins School in Pikeville confirmed Ayla was a sixth-grader there.

Conference at UK to focus on water

LEXINGTON — The University of Kentucky's Appalachian Center is hosting a student-led series of events designed to bring awareness to water issues in eastern Kentucky and beyond. The events Monday through Thursday will focus on ecology, infrastructure and bottled water, and highlight organizations working on water-related issues. The Appalachian Center is based in the university's College of Arts and Sciences. Among the events are a Tuesday screening of the film "Water Stories: Martin County," followed by a panel discussion in the William T. Young Library UK Athletics Auditorium. The speakers will include water activists and Martin County residents Nina and Mickey McCoy. Other speakers include Ricki Draper, a community engagement coordinator and Madison Mooney, a master's student in the UK College of Social Work.

4 students charged in schoolmate attack

LOUISVILLE — An 18-year-old high schooler has pleaded not guilty to second-degree assault and criminal mischief in an assault on a reportedly autistic classmate. News outlets report Damon Simmons is accused of attacking the Iroquois High student Thursday with the help of three juvenile students. An arrest citation said surveillance video shows Simmons and the other students enter a bathroom at the Louisville school after the victim. Another student later found the victim lying in a pool of blood in the bathroom. The victim's sister told WAVE-TV that her brother is on the autism spectrum. The victim told authorities that he didn't know his attackers. He has since undergone surgery for a fractured jaw and the loss of several teeth. WLKY-TV reports related charges have been filed against the juveniles.

Vincennes memories alive through old newspaper photos

By JILL ERWIN
Vincennes Sun-Commercial

Cemetery regent Danny Wilson spends his time ensuring the final resting place of the people who have called Vincennes home.

He takes great care in helping people through difficult times.

But there's one part he gets hung up on.

"I have a major problem with people being forgotten," he said matter-of-factly.

Though most people know Wilson as the caretaker of the city's cemeteries on Willow Street, Wilson is also gaining quite a following on Facebook by keeping people's stories alive through old photographs.

In September, Wilson created a Facebook group called "Old Vincennes Sun-Commercial Photographs," and and he's using it as an outlet to share images immortalized in the newspaper yet often lost to time.

"I started out by posting old newspaper photos on (Norbert) Brown's Facebook page, 'Vincennes Indiana Remember When,'" Wilson said of the local historian's Facebook group.

"But some people were getting mad because I was clogging it up with photos," he said with a laugh.

Wilson, whose social media page has already amassed nearly 3,000 followers, features now dozens of old newspaper photos which he posts on a daily basis.

The images he finds run the gamut: a 1947 photo of Mayor William L. Betz; two high school students writing movie reviews of Tom Cruise's 1988 film "Cocktail;" a 1965 shot of the old Turner Nursing Home just after it was ordered to close for safety violations.

The page includes sports photos, family photos, the busy offices of businesses long since closed, parades, high school dances, awards and even classified ads, among many more.

Wilson's interest in historical records and photographs sparked when he began collecting cemetery records in his professional capacity. Discovering more about the city, specifically its cemeteries, became his passion.

"People say I live in the past, and I do," he said. "I like to surround myself in what we were like back then. Pictures of kids riding their bicycles and playing outside. Family reunions and people talking together on front porches.

"I want everybody to remember what we were," Wilson said.

Part of that remembrance, for Wilson, is acknowledging moments that some might consider mundane.

"Catching the biggest fish or winning the elementary track meet — those little life accomplishments are highlights of life for many people," he said, "and I like to bring those good memories back."

And he seems to be achieving that goal.

Some photos have created all sorts of online comments and conversations between people, particularly the ones that bring those good memories back.

Wilson recently posted a 1965 photo of kids and families ice skating on the frozen pond at Four Lakes, and a flurry of comments followed within hours.

"Look, there I am! The one with her arms out," one resident posted. Others fondly reminisced, leaving comments like, "I remember it like it was yesterday." And so many recalled the homemade hot cocoa after skating or the parents who bought them new ice skates each year for Christmas.

Another picture depicts the late Barbara Cavanaugh surrounded by her six sons back in 1974, one to which a FB user says, "I just loved Barb."

And though nearly anyone can access old newspaper photos through the public library's online system and other internet news databases and subscription services, most aren't willing to — or simply can't — dedicate as much time to researching local history as Willson.

"I have a little room in my house that I spend three to four hours in every day, scouring old newspapers," he said.

Though he definitely has an affinity for serious history, Wilson laughs as he describes his research and interests as the "National Enquirer of history."

He has a collection of hundreds of creative short stories he's written based on little nuggets of information he's found in historical documents, admitting, "I actually wanted to write for the Sun-Commercial when I was young."

What he's found is that all people are multi-faceted. What you think you know, he points out, may only be part of their story.

He points to an example, an obituary, he uncovered of a woman, decades ago, one who regularly found herself on the wrong side of the law.

"She was a prostitute, working at the 100 block of Main Street," he said.

But, according to her obit in the Sun-Commercial, she also went into H.J. Watjen's drugstore on Main Street and regularly stocked up on candy she would hand out to poor youngsters as she passed by.

She died at the age of 19, he said.

It's that fuller understanding of a person that's become so important to Wilson. It's why he shares all those photographs; those are the things that connect us and better bind a community.

Who knows what "other side" of a person someone might find in one of those old photographs, he asks?

He wants people to be remembered long after they've passed on — and not just for the scarlet labels they may have acquired — but for their moments of generosity, too.

"There are just so many wonderful pictures and stories," he said, "and they need to be shared."

American Federation of Teachers' national president Randi Weingarten making an appearance. And it's far from certain if it will result in lawmakers increasing funding or mandating better working conditions.

Lawmakers, however, shouldn't assume that a strike is off the table, Dau-Schmidt said.

"I think the legislature would be smart to be responsive to this," he said. "If they want to keep heading on the track that they are heading on, we very well could have an illegal teachers strike, and they will be in the same position as other states."

The rally is likely just the first step, however, in a longer strategy for Indiana's unions, experts said. Even if lawmakers don't reopen the budget this year because it's set through 2020, the rally could make teacher pay a major discussion in upcoming elections.

"While there is much excitement for Tuesday's rally, don't let it end there," Fort Wayne Community Schools Superintendent Wendy Robinson wrote in a letter to parents on Friday. "Take a look at how your state representatives have voted when it comes to funding public education and supporting teachers, and make your decisions wisely."

In her letter, Robinson announced that the district, one of the largest in the state, would close Tuesday despite initially trying to keep enough teachers at work to stay open.

"This event and the number of teachers requesting to take the day off have grown to the point where I no longer feel we can safely educate our students on Tuesday, Nov. 19," she said.

Many school districts said the decision to close or move to an e-learning day came after the number of teachers who requested a personal day reached a critical mass. Of the districts that canceled school, most will need to make the day up later in the year, while 18 opted to have students complete school work from home using an e-learning day, according to the Indiana State Teacher Association's count.

By asking for a personal day teachers are using a protest approach experts said was similar to a "sick out," when a group of workers organize to call in sick. It's different than a strike, which would mean teachers refused to work and therefore give up pay and eventually lose their benefits.

Teachers mobilize on a smaller scale every year to advocate at the state legislature, but the size of this movement appears to be unprecedented in Indiana. They showed up in force earlier this year on a Saturday, and by the hundreds in 2011 when the legislature was considering restrictions on collective bargaining, but their activism has yet to have such a broad effect on students being out of school.

Over the past few decades, a handful of Indiana districts have seen strikes or threats of strikes when new contracts can't be reached, according to news reports. Gary teachers, for example, went on strike at the start of the 2006-07 school year.

Indiana's rally comes on the heels of successful demands in other states. Last month, Chicago's 11-day strike ended with $1.5 billion worth of concessions from the city across a five-year contract, including raises for educators and support staff, and $35 million annually to help reduce overcrowding in some schools. West Virginia teachers won a 5% raise after a nine-day strike in 2018. Oklahoma's teacher strike ended with a $6,000 salary raise for teachers.

The building national momentum behind teacher's labor movement likely motivated and could benefit Indiana, said Steven Ashby, a University of Illinois professor of labor and employment.

"Every time there's a victory, it empowers teachers across the country," he said.

And so far the rally has avoided criticism from top elected officials, including Republican Gov. Eric Holcomb. Often teachers who strike are criticized for skipping work and causing students to miss class time, said Charles Taylor, a political science professor at Ball State University.

But a lack of criticism won't necessarily translate into increased education funding from the Republican supermajority during a short legislative session, when the state's budget is already set through 2020.

Top lawmakers have been quick to shift the responsibility of raising teacher pay on school districts. While the General Assembly decides how much state funding districts receive, pay is ultimately negotiated and set by local school boards, which decide how much of the district's budget goes to salaries.

"Local school districts are the decision-makers to determine what is best for their school corporation and for their students," Holcomb's office said in a statement. "The governor has made finding long-term sustainable solutions to improve teacher compensation a top priority."

Holcomb created a commission tasked with looking for new ways to increase teacher pay, but the group's report isn't expected to be finished for another year.

Lawmakers sent more money overall to schools last year and relieved pension expenses for districts, which has resulted in some districts announcing teacher raises. Republican House Speaker Brian Bosma pointed to these raises in a statement Friday when asked about Tuesday's rally.

"We support our teachers, the most important professionals for our state's future, and appreciate their service to our state and to the next generation of Hoosiers," he said. "We look forward to working with them to help drive more of the historic increases in education funding provided by the General Assembly to the classroom – where it belongs."

But there was no requirement that districts put any savings from pensions toward teacher pay. And Keith Gambill, the president of the Indiana State Teachers Association union, said the additional funding increase is only expected to keep education spending about on track with inflation.

The state teachers union is calling specifically for lawmakers to take three actions: allocate part of the state's more than $2 billion surplus to schools, pass a hold-harmless provision to protect schools from any negative consequences related to low 2019 ILEARN scores, and repeal new license requirements requiring teachers do 15 hours of professional development related to their community's workforce needs.

Gambill said the union wants the state to give schools $75 million of the estimated $400 million the state will bring in this year above its expected revenue.

Indiana is so far behind neighboring states in teacher compensation that it would cost an estimated $658 million to make salaries more competitive, according to a January report. In 2016-17, Indiana teachers made an average salary of $50,554, according to the National Center for Education Statistics, but starting salaries can be as low as $30,000.

"[Teachers] believe that they've done everything they should to make a difference and that we need to take a different course of action," Gambill said.

2 new downtown Madison developments cleared to go

By MARK CAMPBELL
Courier staff writer

Madison's Zoning Board of Appeals and Plan Commissions last Tuesday cleared the way for two developments in downtown Madison — one to re-purpose a former factory building into a pet hospital and the other to develop more housing in the 800 block of West First Street.

Local veterinarian Kevin Watkins and his wife and business partner, Margo Watkins, were before the Zoning Board of Appeals seeking a conditional use permit to locate an animal hospital and boarding kennel operation on the first floor of the former Meyers Manufacturing building at 202 Jefferson Street.

Local businessman Andy L. Lytle was before the board last month and received approval to develop several upscale loft apartments above the animal hospital on the second floor of what will now be a 24,000-square-foot shared use building.

Watkins, who currently owns and operates Pet Docs, 3048 Clifty Drive, on the hilltop, said by relocating to downtown Madison he can expand from an 1,800-square-foot clinic to an 8,200-square-foot pet hospital with 2,000 square feet set aside for an indoor exercise facility as well as boarding kennels for 16 canines, 16 felines and four intensive care, two isolation and four surgical units.

Pet Docs currently employs seven but Watkins expects to add another veterinarian and create three to five jobs with the move which will provide not only space for expanded veterinary care but also offer pet owners boarding facilities at various levels of service. He said having additional examination rooms and surgical facilities will also allow him to host specialists on a regular basis to service some of the needs local pet owners now must seek in larger cities.

Zoning Board of Appeals members were largely supportive of the proposal with some conditions concerning the disposal of animal waste and remains and noise. The board noted that with that many animals producing waste, a dumpster would most likely be needed on site and that the potential for odor and contamination would make such storage unacceptable.

Watkins said the project architect has addressed noise concerns through design and the materials to be used in the renovation and that a floor drainage system would be used to discharge urine to the city's sewage system and excrement would be collected in a "flushable" waste disposal system for discharge into the sewage system.

Board member Rick Ferris, who farms and has animals, questioned whether discharging animal waste into the city's sewage system is allowed. He said farmers are not allowed that option and wondered if the animal hospital might face similar restriction.

A check Wednesday with Madison Utilities Manager Brian Jackson determined that regular animal waste, like that which will be produced by the proposed animal hospital, may be discharged into the city's sewage system for treatment.

"Something like a pet clinic is not considered a significant producer of waste. It's not a big user like an industry," Jackson said, after conferring with the city's wastewater treatment staff. "They just cannot discharge any medical waste into the sewer system."

Watkins said he hopes to begin construction in February or early March with hopes of being able to occupy the space by Oct. 1.

"I'm pro business and I appreciate the investment and that you are trying to meet and serve the needs of the city," Ferris said while voting in favor of the request.

"You're bringing this property back to a better state than it is," Board member Nancy Burkhardt said.

In an earlier meeting Tuesday at city hall, the city's Plan Commission approved a zoning request by Tandy Development Inc. clearing the way to divide a .31-acre tract at 821 W. First St. into three individual single family residences similar to the townhouses that have been built in that block in recent years.

Brian Martin, who is heading up the project, said the units have two stories of living space with a garage underneath. There would be a setback for city utilities and access both on West First Street and from behind the homes.

Al Huntington, a home owner in the area, questioned if the lot was big enough for three houses, how the structures would deal with drainage and if Martin anticipated simultaneous construction on all three by individual home.

Martin said the divided property would provide for three 30-foot x 60-foot lots, the homes would be similar in construction and design to homes built in the block recently and drainage would be similar to those homes as well with pitched roofs, gutters, downspouts and drainage to the natural direction of existing storm water.

He said all three houses would be built simultaneously with construction beginning within in the next year.

The Plan Commission also adopted a resolution amending the city's Tax Incremental Finance (TIF) zone to correct a situation that created a negative incremental assessed value in part of the zone. The move will add about $11 million in value to the TIF zone and generate additional funds for projects supported by the TIF.

Meth arrest in Carroll

Courier staff report

A Carroll County man has been arrested on resisting arrest, escape and drug charges after police responded to a report of a home invasion Saturday at a residence on Kentucky 55 near Carrollton, Kentucky.

Joshua Quire, 27, was charged with public intoxication with a controlled subtance excluding alcohol, possession of methamphetamine, criminal mischief third-degree, resisting arrest, possession of drug paraphernalia and attempted escape after his arrest Saturday.

A deputy with the Carroll County Sheriff's Department was responding to a report of a home invasion in progress at a residence on Kentucky 55 when Quire was located inside the door of the home and armed with a knife. The deputy placed Quire under arrest but Quire was reported to have resisted and tried to flee.

Quire eventually was apprehended and taken to the Carroll County Regional Detention Center where a search of his body recovered what police described as "a substantial quantity of methamphetamine."

Quire is being held without bond.

Hanover retains Victory Bell with win over Franklin

Panthers to face No. 1 Mt Union in NCAA playoffs

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Hanover had yet to be challenged by a Heartland Collegiate Athletic Conference team all season but with Franklin in town for the 89th annual Victory Bell game, the Grizzlies made sure to put their rivals to the test.

In the end, Hanover passed and slammed the door shut late on its longtime rival, using a late touchdown throw to survive Franklin 27-21 in the regular season finale played at Alumni Stadium. The win clinches Hanover's first undefeated mark in the HCAC since 2003 and the second-straight win over the Grizzlies in the series.

Franklin (5-5, 4-3 HCAC) erased a 21-7 deficit in the second half to tie the game in the fourth quarter. After a 79-yard touchdown pass from Braden Smith to Cole Daab paired with an extra point by Carter Brown to get within 21-14, the Grizzlies hit pay dirt early in the fourth quarter. A five-play, 89-yard drive with 10:53 left in the game saw Jacob Earl run for a 3-yard touchdown and Brown's third extra point tied the game 21-21.

The two teams traded empty drives until Hanover took over with 5:09 remaining and used 11 plays to get inside Grizzly territory at the 35-yard line. Faced with a third and 15, the Panthers went for it all on the play and delivered when quarterback Noah Wezensky was flushed out of the pocket and launched a bomb into the end zone that found the hands of Taylor Bleistein for the go-ahead score. Despite an extra point attempt by Austin Steurer that was blocked, the Panther lead stood at 27-21 with only 1:36 to go.

The Grizzlies put themselves in position to go for the win, marching

Madison girls basketball broke open a fairly close game in the third quarter, scoring the first 12 points of the second half en route to a 68-50 victory over Switzerland County Friday at home.

The Cubs held a 12-point lead at halftime but were on fire offensively to start the second half. Switzerland County couldn't get the deficit into single digits the rest of the way.

Madison coach Sonja Bowyer said that after Tuesday night's loss at Lawrenceburg that the Cubs made several much-needed adjustments.

"We had a few come to Jesus meetings and came out strong to start," Bowyer said. "We've got some tough teams coming out in the weeks ahead and we have to be mentally prepared and come out strong for each game."

Madison junior Jade Nutley led the Cubs in scoring with 19 points, but she was also a defensive force in the paint, something that Switzerland struggled against all night.

"(Nutley) is the real deal, she's a great player. They just guarded us so well all night and our players just struggled with the intensity," Switzerland coach Mark Boggs said. "Give a

Southwestern knocks off Oldenburg, West Washington

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Southwestern's girls basketball picked up a pair of wins over the weekend, both at home.

On Friday, the Rebels held on for a 39-37 win over Oldenburg, then beat Class A No. 12 West Washington 49-46 in overtime on Saturday.

Southwestern used a 12-5 second quarter to take a 22-16 lead over Oldenburg on Friday and still led 32-22 entering the fourth quarter. But the Rebels went just 7-of-16 from the free-throw line in the final frame, just enough to hold off the surging Twisters.

"Statistically, we should have lost this game but we managed to figure out a way to win," Southwestern coach Devin Brierly said. "We did just enough things right to pull it out. It was not pretty by any means, but we found the will and a way to get it done."

Ellie Foley and Ashton Goode each scored 12 points to lead Southwestern while Bella Marcum added 11. Harlee Massauge scored 12 points to lead Oldenburg.

"Our defense kept us in the game and that is something we take a lot of pride in," Brierly said. "We had over 20 deflections which led to some easy buckets, which we like to see."

Southwestern trailed throughout the first half of Saturday's game against West Washington before taking over in the second half. The Rebels outscored their guests 17-11 in the third to close the gap to 39-34, then tied the game with an 11-6 run in the fourth.

There was little scoring in the extra session but West Washington managed just one free throw as the Rebels claimed the win.

lot of credit to Madison, they played very well and we just didn't respond very well to their game plan."

Switzerland County was led by senior Aleiah Thomas who scored 20 points but struggled from the field going only 3-of-12 shooting. The majority of her points came from the free-throw line where she was 13-of-15.

"(Thomas) is the type of player that you just want to chase around but the girls have to learn how to play good strong defense," Bowyer said. "We have to make adjustments during the game and not just foul and give away free points."

For coach Boggs, he said his team simply has to get off to a better start.

"We have to start games better, we can't get down early and then try to dig ourselves out of a hole, we won't win a lot of games doing that," Boggs said. "If we want to be a championship caliber team come sectional time, we have to beat teams like this. These are the type teams that we'll see come tournament time and we can't have periods like tonight where we get behind."

Madison improves to 2-1 with the win and will hit the road on Tuesday when it travels to South Dearborn. The Cubs then host Class 3A No. 2 Salem on Saturday.

Pacers edge Henryville

Aleiah Thomas eclipsed the 1,000-point mark as Switzerland County edged Henryville 46-44 on Saturday at home.

Thomas, a senior, scored 17 points in the contest and reached the milestone on a basket and free throw in the second quarter. The points push her career total to 1,010, just 205 points shy of Brooke Todd's career mark set four years ago.

In addition to Thomas, Kyah Chase had 10 points, Josie Meyer scored six points, Jaden Harrell had four points and five rebounds and Maddie Duvall had four points and nine rebounds.

Switzerland County, now 2-1 on the season, travels to Rising Sun on Friday.

in the way we came out and played the first half — no energy, couple steps slow, disengaged. However, the tides changed after halftime," Brierly said. "We decided we wanted it a little more, picked up the energy, started getting into the groove and playing our game."

Foley scored 16 points to lead the Rebels before fouling out late in regulation. Goode scored 12 points and Trinity McLain had eight to help take up the slack.

"Ellie was once again a huge part of our victory tonight. She took over in the later part of the regulation on both ends of the floor. When she wasn't hitting shots, she was able to find her teammates, and also causing havoc on the defensive end," Brierly said. "After fouling out in regulation, she emerged as a leader from the bench- encouraging, motivating, and supporting her teammates during timeouts. That was awesome to see.

"Knowing we weren't going to have Foley in overtime, our other players really stepped up, physically and mentally, to finish the task at hand," Brierly said. "I honestly could not be more proud of our heart and determination to finish that game. We fought tooth and nail that second half and into OT. First half we didn't do that great, but we came out the second half and fought our tails off. It took all of us. I am so proud of them."

Southwestern (3-1) hosts sectional foe North Decatur on Tuesday and travels to South Dearborn on Saturday.

Christian Academy of Madison's boys basketball got a chance to live out a dream by winning a pair of games in the historic Hoosier Gym in Knightstown on Friday.

In the first game, sophomore Clay Carter returned from injury to tie older brother Luke with game-high honors with 15 points. Senior Trent Haggard had 13 points and 10 rebounds in the paint.

Haggard again had a big game inside in the second game, scoring 15 points and grabbing 13 rebounds in the close win. Luke Carter had a game-high 22 points.

Christian Academy, now 3-0 on the season, hosts the Columbus Hawks on Tuesday.

all the way down to Hanover's 35-yard line with under a minute left but Hanover's defense stood tall. Smith threw three incomplete passes, including a fourth down pass that bounced off the hands of the intended receiver in the end zone and was batted down by the Panthers. Hanover took over on downs and only needed to take one knee before time expired.

Hanover trailed for the first time since week one when Daab scored in the first quarter on a 6-yard pass from Smith and Brown kicked his first extra point for a 7-0 lead but the Panthers never trailed after.

Shawn Coane busted through for a 40-yard touchdown run on the ensuing series then Hanover took its first lead of the game in the second quarter when Wezensky hit Jared Frank from six yards out and Steurer's second extra point pushed the lead to 14-7. Coane's second touchdown run — a one yarder up the gut — put the Panthers on top 21-7 with 11:25 left in the third quarter before Franklin mounted its second half comeback.

Despite some flaws on each side of the football, Hanover still managed to piece together a well-balanced effort with several players aiding in the win.

On offense, Coane finished the day by breaking two school records after rushing for 104 yards and two scores on 19 carries. The junior running back surpassed the career rushing yards mark, passing the record of 3,022 set by Anthony Brantley from 1973-1977 with a current total of 3,031. He also surpassed the single season rushing touchdown record of 17 set by Howard Treesh in 1948, running for his 18th and 19th touchdowns of the season.

Coane also broke the single season total points record a week ago against Rose-Hulman and added to that total against Franklin. Last Saturday, Coane broke Tarrik Wilson's 1998 record of 110 points and now stands at 126 points after the win over the Grizzlies.

Wezenksy finished 22-of-37 passing for 261 yards and two touchdowns with an interception. His top target Bleistein had 119 yards on five catches with a touchdown while Coane had seven catches for 43 yards.

Franklin used its ground attack to keep Hanover's defense on its toes for most of the afternoon. Austin Grunden, a Jennings County graduate, rushed for 217 yards on 27 carries while Jarrett Gibson had 62 yards on six carries and Earl added the score on the ground. Daab led the receiver corps with three catches for 106 yards and two scores.

Freshman Devonte Hardiman led the Hanover defensive unit with 12 total tackles including three sacks. Kornell Dash had 11 tackles including two tackles for a loss and Dakota Manion alongside Ben Panitz had nine tackles and seven tackles, respectively, with a pass breakup each.

Hanover finishes the regular season with a 9-1 mark and 7-0 record in HCAC play.

Hanover now plays at No. 1 Mt. Union (10-0) in the opening round of the NCAA Division III playoffs in Alliance, Ohio. The Purple Raiders are 16-time national champions.

HC to face Mt. Union

Hanover will face a stiff challenge when it opens the NCAA Division III Playoffs on Saturday.

The Panthers will travel to 16-time national champion Mount Union (10-0), which is currently ranked No. 1 in the D3football.com poll and No. 2 in the American Football Coaches Association poll. Kickoff is set for noon.

This year marks Hanover's second-straight appearance in the national playoffs after a drought of 15 years. Mount Union, meanwhile, is making its 31st-straight appearance, including trips to the title game in 13 of the past 14 years. The Purple Raiders last won the title in 2017.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

Hanover splits two in season opener at Hope

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Hanover used a big first quarter to build an early lead and held on for a 61-53 win over St. Mary's in the Panthers' women's basketball opener Friday in Holland, Michigan.

The Panthers led 13-6 after the first and played virtually even the rest of the way, holding on for the win.

Preseason All-American Alexis Nall, a senior from Mount Vernon, scored 21 points and had six rebounds to lead Hanover. Katie Hartman, a senior from Madison, had 16 points and seven rebounds.

Giavanna Paradiso had 20 points and Jade Mosier scored 13 for St. Mary's.

On Saturday, Hanover suffered an 80-30 loss to sixth-ranked Hope College on the final day of the Hope Tip-Off Classic in Holland.

The Panthers found themselves in a 21-6 hole after the first quarter and it never got better as Hope increased on its lead in every frame.

Nall and Kristin Mills led Hanover with eight points each while Brooke Todd, a senior from Switzerland County, scored four points.

Fourteen different players scored for Hope, led by Sydney Muller, who had a game-high 11 points.

Hanover, now 1-1 on the season, travels to Spalding (Ky.) on Friday.

BRIDGE

SHOULD YOU TURN THIS WAY OR THAT?

For many years, The Bridge World magazine has included a quiz called "Playing Suit Combinations" by Fred Gitelman and Jeff Rubens. Now 66 of them have been put into book form with the same title (Bridge World Books). The 96 pages begin with advice on how to analyze combinations, followed by the test-yourself section.

In today's deal, how should South play in either six hearts or seven hearts after West leads the club queen?

Gitelman was a world champion in 2010 but is best known for being the architect of Bridge Base Online (bridgebase.com). Rubens is the editor of The Bridge World. He represented the United States in the 1973 Bermuda Bowl, is a member of the American Contract Bridge League's Hall of Fame and is one of the game's leading theorists.

If North uses some form of Blackwood, he will learn that the heart king (or perhaps an ace if employing Roman Key Card) is missing and will stop in six hearts (or six no-trump).

In six hearts, you can afford one trump loser, but not two. You should start by cashing the ace. If you collect only the eight and the nine, cross to dummy and lead a heart, looking carefully at East's card. If he plays the jack, cover with the queen; if he wins with the king, play low; and if he shows out, gnash your teeth quietly because you are going down!

In seven hearts, though, you must hope that either East has king-doubleton or West has jack-singleton. Immediately play a heart to your queen.

Pollinator Action Group to reassign duties Thursday

By PEGGY VLEREBOME
Special to the Courier

The Pollinator Action Group will meet Thursday to reassign duties because the organizer has changed jobs. Vicki Wehner left as coordinator of the Jefferson County Soil and Water Conservation District to be the clerk at the Jefferson County Highway Department.

The Pollinator Action Group is a subcommittee of the Soil and Water Conservation District. Wehner scheduled and organized the monthly meetings, was in charge of the plant sale and chaired the plant sale committee. Those jobs need to be reassigned, she said in the meeting notice.

The meeting will be from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 21, at Ivy Tech Community College Madison campus.

The group is open to the public and there is no membership fee. Its goals include learning about the plants that attract birds and insects that pollinate, and educating others.

The group's first meeting was in April 2018, before it had a name. In the spring of 2019, the group sold almost 6,000 pollinator plants to the public and also planted six pollinator habitats.

Rebuilding after betrayal from 58-year marriage with husband

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: I read "Dear Annie" now, just as I read "Ask Ann Landers" and "Dear Abby" starting in the 1950s. I hope you can give me some advice.

My husband, "Fred," and I have been married for 58 years. We met when we were both working in Washington, D.C. We were 18 years old. We dated for 3 1/2 years. He presented himself to be charming, a man of good morals, sweet, kind, a Christian and a virgin. I thought he loved me more than anyone. I had some reservations because he spoke of "Mother" frequently, often using the phrase "Mother said."

Once I got to know him better, I felt he had matured. But after marriage, he began to have temper tantrums. I was shocked.

After losing our first baby to a miscarriage, Fred was drafted into the Army and soon sent to Korea. I had begged him to join the Guard, but at his mother's suggestion, he refused.

After he returned home, I became pregnant and had a little girl. A year and a half later, we had a son, born a couple of weeks prior to Christmas.

While out shopping around that time, I saw Fred using a pay phone, so I walked up behind him and overheard a romantic conversation. He made up a plausible lie, and I let it go. Years went by, and he was not good to me.

Last year, after 57 years of marriage, he decided to tell all. He now tells me he was calling a woman for a second date during the week of Christmas. He later called to see if the coast was clear, as she was married, too. He also told me he had slept with prostitutes while in Korea and then had relations with other women in D.C., Chicago — where we lived for a time — and then Memphis, where we now live. He claims he has always loved me and the encounters with other women were "just sex," as if that makes a difference to me.

I am devastated beyond belief.

We are now 80, and I have stage 4 cancer. People tell me I look as if I am in my 60s, and the cancer is in remission. Our children are grown. We have completed one year of counseling. He has been diagnosed as a "sex addict," and I have PTSD. Our lives are in ruin. He denies that he's addicted to sex, and he denies that it was caused by his domineering mother, as counselors have suggested.

I am uncertain as to what to do. I worked hard and invested well and can afford to support myself. Counseling helped some but not much. Right now, I am unable to make logical decisions. Do you have any words of wisdom for me? — A Lifelong Reader

Dear Lifelong Reader: You sound like a remarkable and very strong woman. My advice is that you make the decision NOT to make a decision at this time. Instead, focus on yourself and making you — and only you — happy, whatever that might mean. Go to your church, visit your children and grandchildren. While you're healing from this trauma of deception, it's perfectly reasonable to take a break from your husband. There are different types of therapy you could try. Continue with your counseling and perhaps add some meditation or prayer groups. Spend time with your friends.

At some point, you will realize that your husband had a very troubled upbringing, which contributed to his acting out. This does not excuse his behavior, but hopefully, the realization will give you some peace of mind. Remember that his actions had nothing to do with you or how much he loved you but rather with how little he loved himself.
